Senator Vest Believes in the Per-

International Agreement a Visionary
Project, the United States Must Blaze the Way.

Senator George G. Vest arrived in St. Louis Tuesday night. He is the guest of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. B. Jackson, at the Southern Hotel. He will remain here until Thursday morning and then join his family at Sweet Springs.

Old friends who have seen him say the Senator hasn't looked as well in ten or fifteen years as he does now. His trip to Carlsbad has done him an immense amount of good. His complexion is ruddy and his ernment is now committed. The German farmers are all bimetalists, and I was surprised at their intelligence and general information. They are more advanced than the same class in this country, and their manner of living affords them greater opportunity for the study and discussion of public questions. They go to school and go out to their farms in the daytime to work. At night they are back in the village drinking beer, talking politics. They are Socialists—Socialistic Democrats, not at all like the Socialists and Anarchists who caused that bloodshed at Chicago, but a conservative force in the politics of this country.

"I talked with the bankers at Frankfort and of course found them to be dead-set against the free silver movement. I asked the bankers if they or the rehabilitation of silver as the money of the world were the only ones who could afford to do this. They said 'There certainly ought not to be,' was Senator Vest's ready response, 'and I don't believe there is any man in England who would proceed just as if there were no other nation interested in the question and push it to the limit.' "The United States,"

"If that gold men win in the next Democratic National Convention is there any reason to desire a postponement of a settlement with the free silver men? I am up in the air now, from what I have learned up in the hills for themselves," the reporter asked.

"Senator Vest's reply was, 'I don't believe that I could be nothing but a Democrat, and I don't propose to let the gold men have me out of my party.'

"What do you think is right, to drive them out of the party?"

STRUCK BY A WABASH ENGINE.

Old Barney Arnold Horribly Mangled Near the Stock Yards.

TWO FAMILIES MOURNED HIM

Double Identification Which Carried
Double Grief With It Until the Mistake Was Corrected.

At 7:30 a. m. an old man walking along the stock yard switch of the Wabash Railroad at Hall street was struck by engine 202 of the Wabash system and mutilated horribly. He died ten minutes later in the dry sheds of the Knapp-Stolt Lumber Company. A few hours later the families of Arnold Strojost, 71 years old, Twenty-first and Farmer streets, and of Commodore Barney Arnold, 81, of 1520 Postman street, were mourning as he lay dead. Some time after this the latter identification was proven correct:

The accident, which was witnessed by H. W. Schlimmeyer of 3420 North Fourth street, an employee of the lumber company, was shocking. The victim was walking painfully along the track, leaning heavily on his cane, when the engine struck him from behind. Before, however, the engine had come in sight of him, and shooting out a warning had vainly tried to stop his engine, but the heavy train of stock cars pushed it on.

There was a horrible grinding and when Schlimmeyer rushed to help the engineer drag the body from beneath the wheel, he had to find it was too late. The unfortunate man was placed upon the floor of the lumber shed and an ambulance summoned. He breathed his last before the convulsions started, and was hurriedly carried to the Morgue. The left foot had been completely severed at the ankle, the member remaining in the shoe. The entire left side of the body was torn off at the waist, having been crushed and mangled. Mr. Schlimmeyer believes the man's foot caught in the switch, and he was unable to escape.

Commodore Barney Arnold had worked for Arnold Strojost, who was a wealthy stock-buyer, and had been a resident of St. Louis all his life. There was a similar accident to Strojost and a short time after Strojost's wife and 18-year-old daughter had been killed at the intersection of Franklin and Marquette streets. They were overcome by grief and at once left for the residence of Mr. Strojost's son, Joe, on Marquette and Franklin streets. Post-Dispatch reporters reached the house on Farrar street, it was closed and the neighbors were sorrowfully discussing the tragedy. The son, Frank Krey, pork packer at Twenty-first street and Bremen avenue, the stock yard, where his father-in-law was known, inquired about the tragedy. He was told that the body was not that of Strojost.

Another familiar figure about the stockyards was Commodore Barney Arnold, formerly a well-known ringleader and a warrior in the Civil War. He was the author of his prosperity. Until recently he has lived at Ninth and Buchanan streets, but being unable on account of old age and failing health to support himself, he and his wife took up their residence with their daughter, Mrs. Laura Nutto, at 1520 Delmar street.

Shortly after Strojost's family received news of the tragedy, a policeman notified Mrs. Arnold that her husband had been run over and killed and his body was removed to the Morgue. The victim of the accident had been identified by others than Schlimmeyer and Barney Arnold. Mrs. Nutto and her son, Frank, were greatly distressed and were spending the evening with their parents who were going to spend the evening with a girl friend. When she left the house she went to the stock yards to catch a train for St. Louis. Monday night she was at the Exposition leaning on the arm of the doughty colonel of the lumber company. The colonel, a tall, robust, kindly-looking man, his many political acquaintances. Only once did his visage alter and that was when his eyes met those of Mrs. Nutto. He was a genial temperament, but recent events have tended to make him irascible and hot-tempered at the mention of Col. Dalton's name.

"This is the first unpleasantness that has ever marred our family life," said Col. Dalton to Post-Dispatch reporters at the Laclede Hotel Tuesday night. "I cannot understand our child's fascination for this old man. It almost seems to me like hypochondriacal affection. She loves him, my hands of her forever," and the old gentleman raised his hand solemnly as he said it, and looked very much like old Dalton.

"My husband has been getting absent-minded," said Mrs. Arnold to Post-Dispatch reporters. "His mind and memory were undoubtedly upon something far away when he was killed. He did not hear the engine roar and apparently danger until it was upon him. Of late he has been very hard of hearing. His mind has been giving away and dwelt upon the fortune of former days, and he seemed to feel that, still he remained a familiar figure around the Stock yards."

Within the past few months Arnold's mind had grown feeble from old age, and his wife, whom he married thirty-five years ago, scarcely allowed him out of her sight. His recent walk to the stock yards, however, and when his wife went out at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning he left the house soon after to take his way to the stock yards after his death.

"My husband has been getting absent-minded," said Mrs. Arnold to Post-Dispatch reporters. "His mind and memory were undoubtedly upon something far away when he was killed. gentlemen they will never come here as delegates from Tammany." (Shouts and cheering.)

"I am a delegate here, and I can at least have my say. It may do some good. At least it can do no harm. The gentleman represents the bulk of the business and social life. (Cheers). Who are these gentlemen? Critics of 'Carrots.' That word means flattery. The word 'critic' is applied to any reformer. 'I say they are gentlemen.' (They never showed it," yelled a voice.)

The speaker was interrupted. "I trust the Sergeant-at-Arms will see that these interruptions cease."

There was a pause, and then Mr. Patterson continued. "You may soon if you please, but reform has come to stay and these gentlemen are reformers in the true sense of the word. The people of New York have been just when they consider the government of that city. It is idle to deny that there was room for reform, as was certainly demonstrated."

"That assertions of fraud and corruption were true is demonstrated by the fact that thousands of Democrats voted with the Republicans in the recent election, and that 60,000 of our voters went from us controlled by these people who ask recognition here."

Mr. Bell of Kings, Chairman of the Credentials Committee, took the platform. He said:

"I had the honor last night to preside over the largest committee ever at a Democratic gathering. The whole matter was detailed at length, and later in executive session the matter was referred to me. Mr. Patterson was there and presented his resolution for a third representation. It was defeated by a large majority, and the majority motion was carried to give them one-fifth. Tammany objected and voted against it. I consider it fair and we consider it just that they should have one-fifth. It is an insult to offer one-third (Hisses and groans). We had great pleasure for the Democratic party, but we could not consider the question of the Democratic party of the State. I move the adoption of a resolution endorsing our position."

Charles Guy of Tammany took the stage. One of his first assertions was that Tammany had upheld the Democracy for the last four years, and voted for the Convention. "Who slaughtered Winfield Hancock?"

The Chair: "The gentleman will cease his interruptions."

Senator Guy and Thomas F. Brady spoke for the Tammany Democrats. The latter said that the State Democracy, with the German reformers to help them, was less than one-fifth. They had been given a fifth. Why ask for a half? It is surprising that they did not ask for a tenth. I venture a prediction. If for any reason they still insist on one-fifth, then from that moment they will be without a constituency. I had supposed that after the decision last night, the kicking and cuffing would be over, and that the German reformers would decide whether the action of this committee and convention is right or wrong."

The question was put by the Chair and the People's Party, the German reformers and other resolution giving the State Democracy one-fifth adopted.

The Grace-Fairchild men started to leave, and some of them filed out. There was a repetition of the scene in the Democratic convention of 1888 at Saratoga. The audience heartily cheered and hissed. When the tumult had subsided, the report of the Committee on Permanent Organization was read. The report was read by Dr. Royce Thorne, and James E. Shepard, ex-Gov. Flower to the chair. Assuming the position of Permanent Chairman, Mr. Flower made a brief address. The speech is given in another column.

At the close of ex-Gov. Flower's speech the convention proceeded to nominate a ticket. This work finished it adjourned sine die at 2:18 p.m.

THE PLATFORM.

Declaration of Principles Adopted by the Convention.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The platform makes the following declaration of principles and policies:

1. Home rule. The first essential condition of good municipal government; local jurisdiction and control over purely local matters in all respects.

2. Economy in public expense. No public money for private purposes or political jobs; no audit of official expenditures; a low tax rate.

3. Honesty in public office, no tainted legislation; no corrupt traffic in legislation; no kickbacks.

5. The attempts of prominent Republicans to repudiate their own platform are renewed evidences of their hypocrisy and dishonesty on the excise question, and of their desire to do so.

6. Equal taxation; no unjust discrimination; no favored interest; no partial legislation; home rule in methods of strictly local taxation.

7. Individual liberty; the right of all citizens to equal opportunity before the law; equal and exact justice to all.

13. General taxation for revenue only; no Government partnership with protected manufacturers; no meddling with the present revenue system; no entanglement of business and industry and unsettling of business.

14. Sound money; gold and silver the only legal tenders; no currency and extinguishment of the greenback currency; no free and unlimited coinage of silver.

The platform is a frank denunciation of the last Republican Legislature.

FLOWER'S SPEECH.

Address of the Ex-Governor Upon Taking the Chair.

When he took the chair, ex-Gov. Flower said in part: "I count myself one of active power, but I am too old now to be useful. I refuse to call a meeting of the permanent organization of the party to consider the question of the Democratic party of the State. I move the adoption of a resolution endorsing our position."

Charles Guy of Tammany objected and voted against it.

I consider it fair and we consider it just to give the Grace-Fairchild men every opportunity to prove their true light as political parties.

After giving details of what Mr. Flower said, the contrast between Republican promises and Republican performance, the speaker emphasized himself on national issues as follows:

"I consider it is only to matters of State concern for the coming session of those are the questions of paramount importance, but Federal issues cannot and will not be ignored. In regard to the Democratic party of the State, I move the adoption of a resolution for a third representation. It was defeated by a large majority, and the majority motion was carried to give them one-fifth. Tammany objected and voted against it. I consider it fair and we consider it just to give the Grace-Fairchild men every opportunity to prove their true light as political parties."

The memory of the people of New York is not short, nor can it forget entirely the promises with which the Republican party assumes complete power on Jan. 1, backed by the wealth and influence of the nation.

It is a disgraceful failure to re-deem the promises of the Cuban patriots to the Cuban patriots will be a British craft fitted out with an armament to enable it to cope in Cuban waters with any Spanish warship now cruising there. It was built in the United States not long ago, it is said, cost $1,000,000 for the West India trade and for insurance and insurance and has been running between New York and Cuba.

"I consider it is only to matters of State concern for the coming session of those are the questions of paramount importance, but Federal issues cannot and will not be ignored. In regard to the Democratic party of the State, I move the adoption of a resolution for a third representation. It was defeated by a large majority, and the majority motion was carried to give them one-fifth. Tammany objected and voted against it. THE FREE BRIDGE PROJECT.

The Manufacturers' Association has acted wisely in referring to a committee for careful examination the proposition to have the city build a bridge across the Mississippi by special taxation. A project of this kind, involving the amendment of the charter and grave questions of law and public policy, should be viewed from all sides and put in such form as to assure satisfactory accomplishment before it is recommended to the people.

But the fact that the Association has seriously taken up the subject of a free bridge is most gratifying. The recognition by the business men that a monopoly of bridge and terminal facilities is fatal to the welfare of commerce and that a free bridge is a necessity is a great point gained.

How this free bridge is to be secured, whether it is to be built by the city or by private capital under safe guarantees of freedom from monopolistic control and manipulation, is a matter to be decided after the most careful deliberation. The ability and enterprise of St. Louis business men can be trusted to devise ways and means when once they have determined to secure a free bridge.

The essential thing to be gained is an effective guarantee of permanent freedom. When that is assured under a feasible plan the men in charge of the project may depend upon the hearty support of the community.

CHICAGO'S FIGHTING PARSONS.

Some of the preachers of Chicago are "all wrought up" about Cuba's wrongs. They are counseling American interference "even though it should involve the United States in a war with Spain." They are doing their utmost to stir up the spirit of pugnacity, and they are doing it openly and officially as servants of the Prince of Peace.

They have a right, with every person of humane instincts, to show sympathy for the oppressed, but their method of doing it may well be called in question. A war with Spain might be the firebrand of a universal conflagration. And surely the teachers of the Gospel of "Peace on earth, good will to men" should not be the first to counsel war between two great powers, with all its attendant horrors. There are other ways of aiding Cuba, and there are certainly other and better ways of righting the wrongs of humanity of which Spanish oppression in Cuba only furnishes one example.

It is true that the Deity has been described as "the God of Battles," and in times past religious teachers and preachers have not hesitated to invoke divine aid in offensive as well as defensive wars. But times are changing, and the best thought now prefers to look upon all the warlike language to be found in Scriptural writings as figurative.

THE COURSE OF ANARCHISM.

When Charles Wilfred Mowbray arrived from England a few months ago he proclaimed that he was a philosophical anarchist and brought peace, not a bomb. He assured the public that although the doctrines of his school condemned law and police, they were no less opposed to violent resistance to them and contemplated the elevation of society to a plane of righteous regard for the rights of all that would make law and police superfluous.

Mr. Mowbray belongs to the wing of anarchists who are best represented by John Henry Mackay, the anarchist poet of Germany. The underlying principle of the school is opposition to all force in society. Every man is to be a law unto himself and is to be so imbued with respect for the rights of each individual that the rights of none will be invaded. They depend wholly upon the process of education for the realization of their plan of social advancement. They are a small and harmless band of idealists.

But starting out with these doctrines, Mowbray is brought up in Chicago in the heat of an incendiary speech by the hand of a police officer. He is caught denouncing the police, denouncing the Government, denouncing the flag and hailing the red flag of Anarchy as the banner of salvation.

The experience of this man is common to agitators of revolutionary theories and shows the danger of an active propaganda in their behalf. Mowbray no doubt intended to restrict himself to a peaceful and reasonable agitation, but under the influence of his associates and his passions he soon found himself the leader of violent Anarchists, counselling them to desperate and bloody deeds.

Now can we evade responsibility for the consequences of his counsel if it should lead to acts of violence. No matter what he may think or do, if his reckless words arouse others to action he is a participant in their deeds.

THE NEW YORK PLATFORM.

The platform adopted by the New York Democrats at Syracuse to-day places the candidates who stand upon it in a position to win in November. It conciliates the Anti-Snappers by endorsing the Federal Administration and warmly praising Cleveland as "the first citizen of New York." It calls a halt on tariff agitation, while giving the Wilson bill credit for the improvement of business and industrial conditions. And it deals with two burning questions in a fearless and straightforward manner.

Its declaration for "the single standard of value" (meaning the single gold standard), its declaration against the free coinage of silver, and its condemnation of Governmental tender notes in favor of a national bank currency, express the views that are undoubtedly held in New York and in most of the States east of the Alleghenies. The Eastern Democrats have joined the Republicans on this issue and no party question can be raised upon it in New York State.

The winning feature of the platform is its courageous and outspoken dealing with the excise question. This is one of those "moral questions" in politics which politicians of both parties are always anxious to dodge. It is a matter of congratulation that in both the State conventions in New York the politicians were overruled by the strong popular sentiment aroused on either side by the enforcement of the Sunday law in New York City. The Republican convention pronounced for the maintenance of the Sunday blue laws. The Democratic convention devoted half of its platform to denunciation of unnecessary interference with personal liberty and to what is in substance a demand for local option.

With a good ticket on such a platform the Democrats should win, especially if harmony between the factions can be secured.

UNWISE IRISH COUNSELORS.

The appeal to arms sounded in the Irish convention at Chicago is inspiring and blood-stirring to Irishmen and Irish sympathizers, but it has no ray of promise for poor Ireland. On the contrary, there is reason to believe that it sounds a deeper note of despair for Irishmen in Ireland.

The men who counsel force as the best means of securing the rights of Ireland may be true friends of Ireland, but they are not wise counselors. The cause of revolution in Ireland was never more hopeless than now, because England was never stronger than she is now and the Irish at home were never weaker. The 20,000,000 Irishmen abroad of whom Mr. Finley spoke cannot be depended upon as an effective military force, as experience demonstrated in the Fenian movement.

The attempt to revive this unfortunate movement, therefore, is most unwise. The first bomb thrown, or gun fired, or even the first serious menace of revolution will be the signal for fresh coercion on the part of England. It will set back the parliamentary campaign for home rule many years and will turn thousands of Englishmen now in favor of Irish local government into reactionaries.

The Irish cause has not been obstructed any more by English stubbornness than by Irish dissension. The recent set-back is due rather to discord in the Irish leadership, than to retrogression in English sentiment. It would be of short duration if the Irish leaders entered into perfect harmony and agreement on a feasible plan of agitation and action.

The American friends of Ireland are damaging the cause of Irish home rule by counseling force. The way to help lies in counseling and enforcing harmony in the leadership and in the ranks of Irishmen at home.

Though lady voters were present as members at the meeting of the County Central Committee in Denver, the proceedings were highly riotous, and when a good man called for moderation there were cries of "Put him out!" "He's off his trolley!" etc. Later two commissioners pummeled each other on the floor for ten minutes. It is not unreasonable to suppose that the lady members of the committee would have put in their time much better if they had been out on the road with their wheels.

It is quite flattering to Boss Quay that there should be a report that the Chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of Ohio waited upon him and asked him to express no Presidential preference until after the November election in that State. It put him in the light of President maker and boss almighty—a dictator for the whole Republican party. It will be strange if Boss Platt does not sooner or later exhibit some jealousy of all-savvaging a Boss.

The ex-President favors the idea of the church going into politics. If the church people would all go to work for him, no doubt his delegations would be greatly strengthened. However, there are several other aspiring gentlemen who may address the church before convention time.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Democratic Literary Bureau of the State of Illinois:

Gentlemen—You state "it is our purpose and desire to furnish to each voter in the Democratic party in the State of Illinois information on political and other topics in order that he may become fully informed and be prepared to act intelligently in the election of an officer in the State to make an authoritative declaration as to the issues on which we must go before the people."

You say also, "we do all, favor the use of silver, gold and copper, but we consider that the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 by this country alone would result in disaster to the monetary and commercial interests of the nation."

You do, in opposing the free coinage of silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, ignore the fact that the same is estimated at 16 to 1 by the law of 1873, and that silver at some ratio is better than gold.

If you keep the silver unit of value as fixed by the Congress of 1787 and the coinage of gold and silver at the same ratio, you will be able to get along with the same amount of gold and silver as is now in circulation.

A FREE AUDIENCE

Brought Out by Farmer Mitchell's
Breach of Promise Suit.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 25.—Mrs. Ida M. Hazard is being sued in the Probate Court of Newtown for breach of promise by Farmer Lawrence Mitchell, who wants to marry her. The defendant has had four husbands. His first was Farmer Hazard, for whom she threw over Farmer Mitchell.

The plaintiff is 70 years old, but a good deal younger in appearance, according to his neighbors' standard, and can still dance. For two years he courted the widow. In proportion to their wealth he moved but little, always keeping quiet, a lot of farming implements and a hay rake over to her farm. He was preparing to make himself master there, when, on the last evening, the widow married Hazard. She did not return the animals or the hay rake, and the cost of them is included in the $2,500, for which he asked.

Farmers Mitchell has brought a proceeding suit to marry the widow in, and he determined that this should not go to waste, so on Sept. 1 he started you to get his wedding was upcoming, celebrated by the neighbors, who organized as a tin-can band and played and let off fireworks around the farm, and then, at the evening, by discharging a cannon.

All these joyous neighbors met at Newtown yesterday to hear the brush of protest. The case was adjourned, so that when the farmers climbed into trees, from which the windows of the room could be seen, and got ladders and put them against the building, they were like the fair.

Mrs. Hazard had announced that she would not appear. The court ordered her to do so. She did. Sheriff Lyon and Governor Brown to Monroe, right after they captured her. Lyon had only two seats in his buggy, and Glover came in a sky-buggy, while hay and lumber took up the interesting passengers in front of the Court-house amid the yell of the spectators.

Mrs. Hazard is a large woman, with a pleasant face and dark hair. She wore a dark green frock and a red bonnet with blue flowers and feathers in it. There was a look of admiration as she was worn, for scores of farmers who had loved her at a distance. The lawyers on both sides had a very dramatic wrangle, with words in air, shouted at each other, and then sat down.

"Did you ever visit Mitchell in his house?" Mrs. Hazard was asked.

"What for?"

"For a pleasant view."

"Did you ever make a minute examination of his house? Did he have a view to making it your future home?"

"I didn't. I peeked around in the sitting-room, but not anywhere else."

"He sent you a card, inviting you to his house, and you accepted it, telling him to drive past your house at 9 p. m., hitch his horse under the church shed, and you would meet him there?"

"What? I did not remember."

The attorney for Mrs. Hazard objected.

He said such questions simply tickled the ear of the audience, and did no good. The ex-wife denied that she promised to marry Mitchell if he would stop drinking hard cider.

"Did Mitchell ever give you a bullet?"

"I don't know."

"Did he know that you and Mitchell were partners in the butter business?"

"I don't remember," quoth the fair defendant, demurely. Then the case was adjourned.

A $200 HUSBAND.A Peculiar Suit to Recover in a New York Court.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—A suit to recover $200 loaned under unusual circumstances will be heard before Justice Patterson to-day. It involves points of law of rare delicacy, and incidentally a romance of a most unusual kind. Matthias Ballard, 50 years of age, a widower, who has more than half his summates. He is suing his former friend, John Bagne, an undertaker, for $200 loaned him. The defendant is a cobbler, but he claims that the money was received by him in the shape of a loan from Mrs. Ballard, on condition that when Mr. Ballard died the undying summate would be entitled to take his place as the husband of the widow. Under these circumstances, the undertaker repeatedly took the lady out riding, and finally in 1875 she had married a Mrs. Heide, whose husband he had buried. Thereupon Mrs. Ballard wanted back her money. Bagne refused payment on the ground that, while it was conceivable, it was possible that some time in the future he might be in a position to meet the terms of the loan. He sticks to it, and there you are. The courts must settle it.

FAILED TO ACT.A New York Lawyer's Proposition in the Mutual Reserve Matter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—What was apparently an effort to get up a protesting meeting against the ratifying by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Insurance Association at the Equitable Building failed. A lawyer it appears, who was a member of the bar, failed to unite, but before the discussion had lasted very long two were elected, accused of representing company views, and some heads of the firm of over 100 members of the department policyholders said that it was proposed to pay a dollar down and $20 to prevent ratifying. Lawyer Woodruff, who was one of the electors, said it to be an agreement for the policyholders to sign, but the sentiments of those in attendance indicated that no action was taken.

MAJESTIC MFG. CO.,
2014-2020 Morgan St., St. Louis.THE WORLD'S GRAIN.*Report From Consul-General Max Judd at Vienna.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25.—Consul General Max Judd of Vienna has forwarded to the Department of State a report on the grain crop of the world for 1895, compiled from the report of the annual International Grain Fair, which Mr. Judd conducted for the Ministry of Agriculture. The report shows that the wheat, rye, barley and oats crops of Europe are somewhat below the average, while corn and maize are above. It is estimated that the yield will be one-half again as large this year as it has been on an average for ten years. Canada shows an increase in production, while Australia continues in wheat; while India shows a loss of about double that quantity, both as compared with 1894. Most of the Russian provinces show an increase in wheat production. The Austria-Hungary wheat crop is poor in quality and less in quantity than usual.

The United States grain production is estimated at 28 per cent rye at 16 per cent; oats at 35 per cent of the average. The wheat crop of Great Britain and Ireland is about double that of 1894, while it is at 40 to 50 per cent of the average. The English barley crop will be better than the wheat crop, but the quality is poor. Egypt's wheat crop compares well with

It is anticipated that the yield on wheat in India and Persia will be increased.

China and Japan will be smaller, and that taking this crop throughout the world, the result for the year will be about equal to the average season.

SURPLUS IN SIGHT.Treasury Officials Say It Will Reach $3,000,000 in September.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25.—A Treasury surplus is in sight. For the first time in two years, under normal conditions, the receipts of the Government will this month exceed the expenditures. The indications now are that the surplus for the month of September will amount to about $3,000,000.

This favorable showing is a source of much satisfaction to the officers of the Treasury Department, who believe that the turning point has now been reached and that the new tariff law will henceforth be efficient in raising enough revenues to meet the expenses of the Government. THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH.

DALLAS, TEX., HOTEL CRIME.

Life History of a St. Louis Girl Who Forsook the Straight and Narrow Path for the Road to Destruction.

Until Tuesday John D. Carter of 200 Fifth Street had been for three years in the service of the whereabouts of his old-time daughter, Katie. For ten years she has been to him as one dead. Tuesday he learned that his daughter had been shot, perhaps fatally wounded, by F. P. Williams, with whom she was living as his wife at the St. George Hotel in Dallas, Tex. The twain had left Kansas City a short time before. When found in their room at the hotel in Dallas as which they were staying Williams was dying from a bullet wound in the pit of the stomach. He died in a short time. The woman is in a precarious condition.

This woman and son have overthrown the home on Bruce street. To Carter the thought that he is without means to bring his daughter home again is distressing. To transport her corpse to St. Louis to be laid by the side of her mother, as during the years the more expensive services were not open to him. Not many months since his wife, whom he had married for four years, died in a similar short time. She was his business partner, and after the death of his wife the man with whom he had secured employment was forced to resign, and the business was taken over by another who lay upon him. He was surprised only by the fact that she would sometime come home repentant. That hope has been destroyed.

Two years ago Katie Carter was the pride of her parents. She had been educated at the St. Philomena's School, Ewing and Clark aves., and had proved herself a brilliant student. The elation of the three months of her school life had not all gone when her parents could provide.

One day she disappeared. An active search was made without avail.

She was seen in a saloon, and it was known she was with one Charles Burton, and had been married to him at Alton, Ill. After a time Carter heard that Burton had been arrested and sent to Kansas City to Kansas City where he was a foreman for Norcross Bros., contractors of St. Louis. She was 22 years old when Burton was arrested three years ago, and Carter heard nothing more about her from his daughter.

Burton was a tall, well-made man, and seemed an estimable man, and Carter was partly satisfied. But again he had lost sight of them, and of his daughter's movements subsequently. Finally he learned that shortly afterward she and Burton separated, for what reason he says he never learned.

When a Post-Dispatch reporter found Carter he was almost savage in his grief. Then with the tears starting to his eyes he told the story of his daughter's wanderings.

Since she and Burton separated said Carter, "I do not know where she has been. She went with Burton to Topeka, Kan., and to Utah, but finally returned to Kansas City. I have written to her, and have secured an Oklahoma driver from her. I hoped then that she would write to me and let me bring her home. God knows, I would do a little for her. I did not know her then, but when I went into Highwood and took the train for Milwaukee."

"When the companies were scouting for drivers, I was offered a job, and I accepted it, and when I heard the first shot fired, I knew Coffee had been hit, for he heard my cry out. The second shot hit the skin on the left side of his head.

"As soon as I regained my feet," he said, "I made a bee-line for the hospital and went straight through the iron gates. But she kept silent and until this I have heard nothing from her. She was a good girl before, a fit companion for any man, and she has been better for her to have died ten years ago than to have brought this shame upon herself and me."

In his letter to the private detective he tells a remarkable story of his escape. He says that he and Coffee were well provided with money, and when he heard the gunshots for liberty when he heard the first shot fired, he knew Coffee had been hit, for he heard my cry out. The second shot hit the skin on the left side of his head.

"It is my intent to proceed to Cuba, and when I get there I will apply to the Consul of the United States for an audience with the commanding general of the army. There I will have some satisfaction in becoming a target for bullets, for it is my intent to be shot down in such a manner that to be murdered by comrades while trying to escape from persecution and tyranny."

C. WILLIAMS.

In his letter to the private detective he tells of his plan to return to the States.

"I am not going to return to the States, but shall go at once to Cuba. There is a company being organized here to go there and I will be a member of it. I will take one of them. I may do all right, but I would prefer it that way than to be shot as a military captive."

In his letter to the private detective he tells of his plan to return to the States.

"The two young men of the wounded woman and her two brothers, one of them older than herself, are with their father on Puget street.

Letters found in the St. George Hotel, where the tragedy occurred, tell the story of the woman's shame, as her father probably knew her. The circumstances of the shooting are puzzling, and the police are still at a loss to determine just what caused the bullet to pierce his body and lodging in a slot of the bed. It entered either at the stomach or at the heart. The bullet did not penetrate far enough to indicate the latter, but the wound there is very small and makes a large hole where a bullet of that size enters.

The woman's wound is in the right side. The bullet passed through her body and dropped to the floor. She was able to converge the opening of the wound and insisted that not Wilson, but some third person, had committed the deed. She said she had been shot in the right side about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday she was awakened by pistol shots. Wilson was wounded and unconscious, and she herself in agony from a pistol shot in the left side. She had been and had quarreled with him several months before, but they had been reconciled last week. She had been shot in the left side, and he was carrying a pistol when he came to attend the Corbett-Piximmons fight. Last week, stated the woman, Wilson tried to persuade her to take morphine, and Monday he was evidently under its influence, but she resisted.

The letters found were from her former husband, Burton, who had last year sold from admiring women, some of whom to Katie Cline, some to Mamie Spencer and others to Mrs. Burton, showing that the woman was a good girl and that Burton was a scoundrel.

Porteus jumped between them and said he had saved Gatlin. Garcia accepted the challenge and insisted that it was a fair fight and he was satisfied. He was badly hurt, but may recover.

SWORDS FOR TWO.

Duel Between Mexicans at the Atlanta Exposition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 25.—Geron Sertuch is a tall bull fighter. Don Carlos is a lion. Both belong to the Mexican team. An American girl, employed at the village, estranged the two men, formerly chums, and caused a duel between them to promenade with him night before last. The hour was late when they got back to the village. As they stepped within the gate of the arena, a pistol was fired from the entrance. In each hand he held a long sword. Garcia accepted the sword which his rival offered. Wilson was so badly wounded that he fell in the arena, where the light shone in from the midway. The girl ran to him and assisted him to get back to the village. As they stepped within the gate of the arena, a pistol was fired from the entrance. In each hand he held a long sword. THE BEST OF ALL

IN ALL THINGS AT ALL TIMES.

There are many GOOD life insurance companies, but among them all there must be one BEST.

THE BEST is THE EQUITABLE. If you wish to know why, send for: 1, The report of the Superintendent of Insurance for the State of New York on the examination of The Equitable; 2, For actual results of maturing policies; 3, For statement of death claims paid in 1894. Then you will know the three great reasons of The Equitable's supremacy: 1st, Its financial stability; 2d, Its great profits and advantages to living policy-holders; 3d, The promptness of its payments and liberality of its settlements.

WOMAN INCONSTANT.

Stories That Were Told at the Single Man's Club.

Half a dozen men, some decanters, ice, Apollinaris and soda water, a general atmosphere of tobacco and good fellowship, and you have the Single Man Club. Not an ordinary club by any means, the members cannot be counted in thousands, hundreds or even tens, for there are only six. No lordly marble-fronted premises raises its proud front in Piccadilly or Pall Mall, but the Single Men have six distinct meeting places in London alone—the residences of the six members, some luxuries as these are, are far more lordly about them than before the chambers of a private gentleman. A deer forest in Scotland, an ocean liner in Norway, a steam yacht at the mouth of the Rhine. A steam yacht at the mouth of the Rhine, and a "cuite" are also distinguishing features, as is the couch on which the boy was married. For a little time the boy was dead, and then he was discovered to be a hero in the shape of a story.

It was, of course, a tale of an inexperienced youth who happened to fall in love with an experienced girl. Gerald Lorraine was the boy and Belle Tempima the girl. They had been to the opera, and late at night before the wedding the boy gave the girl a handsome set of diamonds costing about 15,000 pounds. "Oh! the joy of that girl," said the boy, "she had red hair." "I am glad to say she was a woman for your brother," she said. "And then she was calm, she calmly kissed me on the cheek. 'It will make them hum when I show her my photo,' he said. 'I naturally fell in love with her at first sight. 'Hehe, hehe, heh! I of course went after her—didn't see the train or perhaps he didn't see me. 'She is a woman for your brother,' she said. And then she was calm, she calmly kissed me on the cheek. BURGLARS BOLD.

Wife Choked to Silence While the Husband Was Robbed.

Spotted to the Post-Dispatch.
NEWARK, ILL., Sept. 24.—One of the most daring robberies ever committed in this city occurred here last night. Thieves got into the City Hotel and entered the room of the proprietor, W. R. Henderson, while the other covered his wife to keep her from screaming. They made off with $20 in money. Of late a great many burglaries have been committed here, but this is the most daring of them all.

HIS SISTER'S PROPERTY.

Albert Fress's Anxiety to Claim It Cost Him $15.

Albert Fress called at the Four Courts Tuesday night to make complaint against a swindler. He had been cheated out of $15, he said, but he didn't know who it was. What he wanted to do was to turn other people against the same man. Fress is employed by O. J. Lewis & Co., auctioneers. Several days ago a man calling himself Charles Mullen, from Manhattan Beach, Kansas, called on him. Russell had red hair and an air of candor. He told Fress that his brother-in-law, James Mullen, had a farm of 150 acres of good property. Fress's sister had married Mullen, so Fress decided to claim the property. He went to see that Mullen was really dead. Mrs. Mullen would inherit the property. Russell made out claims and put Fress to the trouble of visiting the farm. Fress's name was not on the sign their names. When this had been done Russell secured $15 from Fress to go to Kansas and has not been heard of since.

INDIANS STILL SULLEN.

They Want Redress for the Wrong Inflicted on the Bannocks.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Commissioner of Indian Affairs has made his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior. All shown progress nearly all directions. The only new important developments during the year is the trouble between the black Indians and white at Jackson Hole, Wyo. On this matter Commissioner Browning encloses a former special report he made on Aug. 17. Since that report, however, nothing has been reported to the Department of Justice, and the Attorney-General has reported that no Indians are now confined in Wyoming for violation of the laws. The Indians who were held having been allowed to escape. The Department of Justice does not see how redress can be obtained for the Indians who have suffered.

Commissioner Browning quotes from recent reports of Agent Teter to show that the Indians are still sullen, and that they are still plotting who among them will be punished, and the Commissioner asks whether or not the Department of Justice cannot do something towards punishing the offenders.

Willing to Listen.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Pall Mall Gazette this morning prints leader on the subject of the Irish National Council of Chicago. The Gazette expresses the opinion that the so-called new movement is very like the old one which was temporarily crushed by the arrival of Dr. Cronin at Chicago.

"We can afford to smile at Mr. Finerty's statement," says the Gazette. "The Irish will form their own demands and agitate for redress in the manner adopted by Englishmen they will find England more than ready to meet them half way. Threats only stiffen our back and dull our hearing."

Chased Him and Caught Him.

"Birdie" McNamara, a brother of the notorious crook, got into trouble Tuesday but he also caused a whole lot of trouble. "Birdie" was arrested on a charge of Evertowski, at 2024 Cass Avenue, Tuesday and walked out with three pairs of shoes valued at $2. Evertowski saw him and yelled at him. "Birdie" then chased McNamara through back yards, over fences and down alleys. They finally fired two shots at him and McNamara surrendered. A warrant charging him with peit larceny was issued Wednesday.

ELEGANT SOUVENIRS FOR ALL

SOUSA'S ENCORES.

How the Band Master Manages to Be Obliging on Short Notice.

"I am often asked how it is we respond to encores so quickly and with so little trouble," said Mr. Sousa, as he was resting between the two concerts last night. "I have a plan of my own. Every man in the band has an encore book in which there are two sets of encores, each set comprising over sixty pieces, such as the 'Lagoon' of Handel, 'Down to the Whistling Coon.' Each of these books is made with an extra lap. Each composition occurs twice on the index plan. I think that it is necessary to respond to an encore, I call out a number."

"Mr. Mariani, who directs, announces the number to the other side, and in a moment every man has his book open at the right place so that at the time of the encore the players all say 'read.' We keep a record of the encores played, because we receive so many requests through the post office to play an encore after a certain number. This record shows that during the first sixteen days of the Exposition we played 1,100 different encores."
